WHAT GATORS GIVE
2011-2012

UF LEVIN COLLEGE OF LAW ANNUAL REPORT

Gifts received July 1, 2011 – June 30, 2012
It is great to be a Florida Gator! The past year serving as president of our Law Alumni Council has been a wonderful experience due to your commitment to our law school, in addition to the enthusiasm that continues to exist with our recent graduates. Despite difficult economic times, you have answered the numerous calls to help contribute financially to the college of law, thereby providing valuable resources to transform our law school into the premier law school in the nation.

I cannot thank you enough for showing your commitment to the culture of giving, through your contributions to the UF Law Annual Fund this year. Due to the generosity of dedicated alumni and friends, $834,053 was given to the college through our annual fund during the most recent fiscal year. Further, our recent graduating class has clearly shown their commitment to the culture of giving through their amazing class gift. The spring 2012 class gift totaled $55,750 in pledges. Your giving has allowed our college of law to thrive, despite a significant reduction in public funding. We have continued to attract great students, while also strengthening our law school through the continued improvement of its facilities and the amazing work being conducted by our distinguished faculty.

Matthew Posgay (JD 94), President, University of Florida Law Alumni Council
One of my law partners recently related to me a conversation he had with his college-age son on the importance of making sound investments. His son asked him what the best investment he had ever made was. My partner quickly replied that the answer was obvious. He told his son that his best investment was his law degree from the University of Florida. He recognized that it was his law degree that had allowed him to make other investments, raise and support his family, and to actively support various groups and charities.

Why do Gators give so generously of their time and money to the college of law? The usual responses are a desire to give something back, an appreciation for the education received through the College of Law, the hope to make UF Law even stronger and to support current law students who need financial assistance. Simplified to its essence, the gift of time and money is based on loyalty and appreciation.

Our law school alumni have a long and rich history of giving their time and money to the College of Law. The college’s capital campaign, which concluded this fall, has raised more than $32 million while at the same time, our UF Law Annual Fund contributions remain at record levels with $834,053 raised this past year. In addition to strong monetary support, many alumni give generously of their time by service on the Law Center Association Board of Trustees, the Alumni Council, as adjunct faculty, guest lecturers, recruiting superior students and as mentors for current students.

In today’s society, lawyers are called upon regularly and generously to give their time and money to a broad range of charitable institutions. Lawyers are often the leaders in their community service organizations, their religious institutions, local education, governments and many civic groups. With so many worthwhile causes, why do UF law graduates give so generously to the college of law? The answer is simple. Most alumni recognize that their law education is the foundation of the success they have achieved and that without their law degree that they would not be in the position to support all the other worthy causes.

There is no doubt that a law degree from the University of Florida is a great buy. Our tuition has always been and remains extremely low. Tuition pays only a portion of the expenses of the college. The balance of the expense is paid by state support and private contributions. Every UF Law graduate has benefited greatly from the support provided by the citizens of Florida and the prior alumni who supported the college while they attended. Our alumni give generously out of their loyalty and appreciation to the university and their recognition that a UF Law degree was indeed the foundation of their success. The support of our alumni to our College of Law makes it possible for students of today and tomorrow to gain the advantages of being a Gator lawyer.

I thank you for your generous support of the college of law.

Ladd H. Fassett (JD 79), Chair, University of Florida Law Center Association, Board of Trustees

The UF Foundation Investment Company (UFICO) carefully invests this fund to yield a dependable, stable source of income in perpetuity. Approximately 4 percent of earned interest from the market value of the fund was transferred and spent for uses specified by donors and college administrators for annual operating and administrative costs (earned interest above 4 percent is returned to the fund balance.)
“I’m fortunate to have done well in my class action consumer law practice, while also getting good results for the consumers I represent. It’s a huge privilege to pass some of that good fortune back to UF Law School, which laid the groundwork for my career.”

The value of giving

"As a Florida native who wanted to remain in this state to practice law, my decision to attend the best law school in our state was an easy one. Due in large part to the financial contributions of alumni, the value of my education exceeded the cost of my tuition. It is our responsibility to continue this culture of giving so that our beloved law school can become the greatest public law school in the country."

“The friends I made at UF Law School are still instrumental to my success more than 30 years later as a real estate and business lawyer. I was introduced to a law firm full of Gators at an on-campus interview, and I’ve been with them ever since. The Gator Nation is everywhere, and so is Gator Law.”
