YOU HOLD THE KEYS TO UF LAW
Third-year law student Steve Medina (pictured left) received the 2013 Fall Book Award for Trade Secret Law, which is sponsored by donor Oscar Sanchez (JD 82). Sanchez, an Akerman Senterfitt shareholder, donates in the form of unrestricted funds. He hopes to give the dean and his staff the ability to direct them in the way that is best suited to enhance the student experience.

“As a graduate, I benefited from the excellent legal education I received here,” Sanchez said. “It is my obligation to give back, or ‘pay it forward,’ so that today’s students can get a top-notch legal education, like I did, and become tomorrow’s leaders in government, business and the law.”

Thank you to the many UF Law alumni and friends who have made contributions of time, treasure and talent.

ALUMNI GIVING AT RECORD HIGH

Gator lawyers have a long and rich tradition of supporting our law school. The law school’s capital campaign, which concluded during the past year, raised almost $32 million from more than 4,800 donors. At the same time, annual giving from law alumni has remained at record levels with more than $848,000 given last year to the Levin College of Law’s Annual Fund.

Every Florida law graduate has benefited greatly from the support given to the law school by those who graduated before them. A law degree from the University of Florida is a great buy. Our tuition has always been and remains low. The tuition and state support does not cover all of the expenses of the Levin College of Law. The balance of support comes from alumni gifts. The alumni support is extremely important as it provides the extra financial resources needed to attract and retain top professors and students and to develop and sponsor programs and opportunities for our law students that would not exist without the alumni support.

In this issue, we recognize the many alumni who have generously given financial gifts to the Levin College of Law within the last year. The alumni who give often characterize their gifts as “paying back a debt” in gratitude for the legal education they received at the Levin College of Law. Most alumni recognize that their legal education is the foundation for the success they have achieved. Alumni give out of a sense of loyalty, appreciation and a desire to help our law school.

It is particularly gratifying for the Levin College of Law to receive gifts from our newest alumni. Last spring’s graduating class gave a check as a class gift to the law school of $50,000 at their graduation. Before they even earned their first paychecks as lawyers, these graduating students were motivated to give generously to the law school. Their contributions are a great reflection of how they viewed their experiences at the University of Florida.

If you are an alumna and have not had the opportunity to financially support our law school, I urge you to join your fellow alumni by giving a gift in the upcoming year. Your gift is not only a thank-you for your experience at the University of Florida but an investment in the future of our great institution. Your support will make it possible for the law school to provide an even-more-positive experience for students of today and tomorrow.

I thank you for your generous support of the Levin College of Law.

Ladd H. Fassett (JD 79), Chair, University of Florida
Law Center Association, Board of Trustees

GREETINGS, UF LAW ALUMNI!

The past year serving as Law Alumni Council president has been a wonderful experience due in large part not only to your commitment to our law school but also as a result of the enthusiasm that continues to thrive in our recent graduates.

Despite what still proves for many to be uncertain economic times, you have answered the call, contributing financially to the college of law and providing valuable resources to transform our college into one of the premier law schools in the nation.

On behalf of the college of law and alumni everywhere, I cannot thank you enough. Establishing a culture of giving among our alumni is critical to our college’s continued success in this ever-increasingly competitive, global economy. Due to the generosity of dedicated alumni and friends of the College of Law, we have broken all annual fund records, raising more than $848,000 in the most recent fiscal year.

Further, our recent graduating class has clearly shown its commitment to the culture of giving through its amazing class gift, which totaled $50,000 in pledges. Your record-breaking generosity in the face of a public funding reduction has allowed our college of law to thrive.

We continue to attract top-notch students, educated by distinguished faculty, and present world-class speakers and programming in facilities that are the envy of our competition. In short, one of Florida’s flagships continues to shine as bright as ever.

With the close of my administration, however, brings the close of one of the great chapters in UF Law’s history. It is with both gratitude and admiration that I sincerely thank Dean Robert Jerry for his unparalleled commitment to the University of Florida Levin College of Law over the last decade. Without his leadership and truly tireless efforts, executing precision and well-thought-out plans that lead to exemplary results, I would not be here boasting of our collective success this day. As alumni, Dean Jerry, we are forever indebted to you. As Gators, we are proud to call you one of our own. Thank you for everything.

I look forward to working with all of you in the future as we continue our mission to strengthen the University of Florida Levin College of Law and produce the best lawyers in the nation. All hail, Florida, hail!

Jack Bovay and wife, Leslie, established a book award for his Advising the Entrepreneur class. “Those whom we honored with this award taught us to give back to our community, with both time and treasure, and this gift and the class are a small effort to do so,” said Bovay, an adjunct professor at UF Law. Bovay said the class is just a small part of a nationwide trend to revamp the third-year law school curriculum. He said it exposes third-year students to what an office practice is like. Bovay, a shareholder in the Gainesville office of the Dean Mead law firm, is board certified in both tax law and wills, and trusts and estates.

Michael Minton said he and his wife pledged $100,000 toward the Michael D. Minton and Mary P. Minton Scholarship in Law to assist students graduating from the UF College of Agricultural and Life Sciences who want to pursue a law degree, and if desired, their LL.M. in Taxation. “It’s important to give back to students who come from within the agriculture industry,” said Minton, who serves as the chair of Dean Mead’s Agribusiness Industry Team. “We want to enhance the breadth of experience these young people receive by giving them the opportunity to attend law school and achieve a well-rounded education.”

The Honor Roll includes the names of all donors to the UF Levin College of Law from July 1, 2012, to June 30, 2013. If your name is not included and you think it should be, one of the following may be the reason it is not:

- You made a pledge instead of a gift and planned to fulfill your commitment after June 30, 2013. (Only actual pledge payments made between July 1, 2012, and June 30, 2013, are listed.)
- A personal gift was made using your company’s check or letterhead or was made through a foundation or other giving organization. In this case, look for your corporation or the organization’s name in the Honor Roll.
- We made a mistake. Despite our best efforts, errors and omissions occur. If so, please accept our apologies and notify the UF Levin College of Law Office of Development & Alumni Affairs, at 352-273-0640, or email Missy Poole at poole@law.ufl.edu.

BOOK AWARDS honor top students in each course while providing unrestricted Annual Fund support for UF Law students, student organizations, faculty and programs.
ALUMNI RECEPTIONS are opportunities for alumni to connect with one another and the college.
“The donation you are asking about is my law firm’s book award for Trial Practice. This area was selected since my law firm is a civil litigation and trial firm that supports the preservation and protection of the Seventh Amendment of the U. S. Constitution, which guarantees a right to civil jury trials. Unfortunately, the judiciary and civil jury trials have been under attack for too long. As attorneys, we cannot allow it to happen.

“I hope to help nurture the growth of the best law students in Florida while also helping law students recognize the vital importance of an independent judiciary and a strong civil jury system.”

few years ago, when I attended the University of Florida College of Law, I was inspired to be involved in protecting Florida’s water resources. It is important to have an excellent faculty and a robust curriculum designed to prepare students for the complex issues presented in managing and protecting water resources of South Florida.

The first and most important step to be undertaken in effectively dealing with complex, highly regulated industries such as environmental, land use, water supply and quality is through legal education,” he said.

Florida Moot Court President Dylan Shea (JD 13) had a plan. As he took over leadership of the team for the 2012-2013 school year, Shea realized that a leap into the nation’s top ranks required the Florida Moot Court Team to travel to more events, and that required more money. So Shea began calling former Florida Moot Court presidents and members, spearheading a drive to raise money for an endowment that would consistently pay for team travel.

“We realized that we were never going to be able to grow to the size that we needed to go to and compete on that national scale unless we had more money,” said Shea, an associate real estate practitioner with Lowndes, Drosdick, Doster, Kantor & Reed, P.A. in Orlando.

C. Andrew Roy (JD 11), an associate with Winderweedle, Haines, Ward and Woodman, P.A. in Orlando who specializes in bankruptcy, creditor’s rights and appellate work, was among the former presidents who answered the call.

“Our competitions are the heart of what we do and it really helps us develop as students and as lawyers,” Roy said after a recent moot court competition in the Martin H. Levin Advocacy Center courtroom. “I competed every semester while I was in school, and it really gave me a passion for doing appellate work.”

Thanks to their efforts, the endowment is well on its way to becoming a reality.

GIVING
... for the unexpected

“We give to the annual fund to give the dean the flexibility to use the funds to help meet the most current and pressing needs of the law school.

“The law school and student organizations always have immediate needs that were not adequately anticipated or budgeted for. The annual fund gives the dean a way to provide immediate funding to programs that need it the most at a time when the funds are crucially needed.”

... time and expertise to build diversity at UF Law

BY JENNA BOX (4JM)

Alumni can contribute to UF Law in more ways than writing a check. Giving time to important efforts via task forces and committees, lending expertise and mentoring ensure the success of the law school, too.

Last year, members of the Admissions and Diversity Task Force made such a contribution.

Committed to broad diversity and concerned with the small number of black students in the entering class of 2012, UF Law formed the task force and asked its members to join efforts to do better.

With the outside knowledge of alumni Mike Bedke (JD 84), Eugene Pettis (JD 85) and Christopher Chestnut (JD 05), combined with the inside knowledge of faculty, students and administrators, the task force built upon an alumni-student partnering program already in place.

“We have an Alumni Match Program where admitted students are matched with an alum and the alum helps them through the decision-making process of choosing a law school,” explained Assistant Dean for Admissions Michelle Adorno.

Bedke came up with the idea to expand the original program to cover the entire law school experience. He called it Team UF.

Bedke’s Team UF program is designed to recruit and retain minority students in a way that is analogous to how colleges recruit and retain student athletes, he said. Bedke introduced it to the task force as a “cradle-to-grave” approach: alumni would make initial phone calls to admitted students, prepare them for the 1L year and answer questions, encourage them to get involved throughout the 2L and 3L years, help them graduate, pass the bar and land a job in their area of choice.

“I think that in such a competitive market we’ve got to differentiate ourselves,” Bedke said of UF Law. “Frankly, letting people know that we want them and that we’re committed to their success is the key.”

And far from over promising, the task force delivered, Bedke said. The results of Team UF were apparent in the numbers: Black student enrollment in the 1L entering class went from 10 in 2012 to 38 in 2013, and minority enrollment in the entering class was the highest since 1999.

“Team UF ... has the potential to change positively the culture of our law school,” said Pettis, co-chairman of the task force and president of The Florida Bar. “Bringing an outside perspective is a positive contribution you couldn’t necessarily have if you’re coming from within the institution, and I think it’s critical that alumni work in partnership with the law school to address issues not only of fundraising but issues such as this diversity task force did.”

The results of this alumni partnership with UF Law proves how critical alumni involvement truly is. For Bedke, he just says he’s “paying it forward.” He wouldn’t be where he is today without having attended UF Law, noted the partner at DLA Piper who heads its Real Estate Group in Florida.

“Even if someone, particularly in these challenging economic times, doesn’t necessarily have the wherewithal to write a check, he or she can absolutely donate some time,” Bedke said. “Participation that puts (alumni) directly involved with other alumni or students on campus and gets them back to Gainesville is more fun and more rewarding than just sending your check.”

Brian Phillips (facing page) donates toward the book award for Procedures in Tax Fraud Cases and to assistantships just like the one Caitlin Foster received in Graduate Tax. In fact, the assistantship has helped with her decision to pursue an LL.M. at UF Law.

“It’s donations like these that make my position possible and provide positions for many other LL.M. students as well,” Foster said.

Phillips said helping to preserve and grow UF’s nationally recognized LL.M. program is part of his personal commitment as an alumnus, adjunct faculty member and a “giant fan” of the program.

“I think that attracting and rewarding the best students strengthens the program and makes the entire experience better for everyone.”
