Law School In PBS Documentary on UF

By Christine Williams, Communications Program Assistant

A half-hour documentary on UF will air on statewide and southeastern United States' PBS-TV stations — and locally on Cox Channel 12 (WUFT-TV Channel 5) — Sunday (Feb. 10), at 12:30 p.m. During the 30-minute program — part of the regular Florida Crossroads Series — producers report that major aspects of the university will be featured, including the Colleges of Law and Medicine and Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences.

Law school officials are hopeful a good portion of footage filmed on campus in November will be included in the section devoted to the Levin College of Law. This includes an interview with Dean Jon Mills, and portions of a Moot Court trial, Gator TeamChild clinic and one of Professor Sharon Rush's Constitutional Law II classes.

Footage shot with Professor Sharon Rush (left), among others, may be included in the award-winning Florida Crossroads documentary on UF.

Rush said the students were "wonderful and well-prepared" for the filming, which lasted about an hour. Their impromptu discussion of Bush v. Gore was "exciting and unplanned," Rush said.

"We're optimistic the two or three minutes that could be devoted to the law school will help reinforce our quality programs and faculty/staff," said Communications Director Stan Huguenin, who assisted producers with arrangements.

The award-winning Florida Crossroads is in its 14th season. It originates from and is produced by WFSU-TV in Tallahassee. Periodically it devotes an entire program to "... on Campus," which features state universities, including interviews with educators, administrators, students and alumni to "tell the story" of the institution and its locale. Crossroads on Campus explores strengths of Florida's public universities and discovers what sets them apart. The series so far has covered seven of the 10 public state universities. Florida International University (FIU) in Miami and Florida Atlantic University (FAU) in Boca Raton are planned for later this season. Visit http://www.wfsu.org/Florida\_Channel/florida-channel.htm for detailed schedule information.

Career Development Conference

Interested in bankruptcy? Litigation? Corporate law?

The Second Annual Career Development Conference will take place Feb. 16 at the UF Hotel and Conference Center. The conference will give students an opportunity to gain first-hand insight into different legal careers, and will feature panels and a reception with representatives of law firms from around the state.

Lunch for students will be provided by the law firm of Gray Harris, and lunch for attorneys will be provided by the Law College Council. The event is sponsored by UF Student Government and Board of College Councils.
