

Conference to Explore State Resources Conservation

Dozens of national and state experts will focus on “Florida’s Final Frontiers: Saving What’s Left,” at UFLaw’s Ninth Annual Public Interest Environmental Conference. The event kicks off with an evening reception Feb. 27 at the Florida Museum of Natural History and concludes March 1.

Jan Schlichtmann, one of the country’s leading civil litigators in the fields of environmental protection and product safety, will give the keynote address Feb. 28th. He received national recognition for his representation of Woburn, MA, families impacted by water supply contamination – chronicled in Jonathan Harr’s national best-seller A Civil Action.

Panelists will discuss Florida resources, land and development, water, wildlife and habitats, and policy and procedure. Plenary sessions will look at toxic tort litigation, including cases currently under review in Florida.

The conference is sponsored by the UFLaw Environmental and Land Use Society and Center for Governmental Responsibility in cooperation with the Environmental and Land Use Law Section of The Florida Bar. Financial support is provided by the Jelks Family Foundation, UF Student Government, Law College Council and Hopping Green & Sams, P.A. of Tallahassee. To register or for more information: go to www.grove.ufl.edu/~els or call CGR at 392.2237.

Students in the Environmental and Land Use Law Society (ELULS) help coordinate the annual public interest environmental conference. 2003 ELULS members hope to duplicate the success of 2002 organizers (above), who brought top environmental experts to Gainesville.

Beyond the Law School:

Helping the Homeless

Only a small percentage of Gainesville’s homeless people can access food and shelter, and inclement weather hits this group hard. Legal Writing Professor Joe Jackson and CGR Director of Social Policy Elizabeth McCulloch help distribute food, blankets, clothing and supplies to the homeless during semiweekly ‘runs’ as volunteers with the Homeless Outreach Mobile Effort (HOME). During last week’s freeze, they brought hot chocolate and provisions to 40 of Gainesville’s needy.

“We give a hand-out, not a hand-up,” said Jackson, former chair of the now-disbanded Safe Space Task Force, which had generated ideas for temporary homeless housing at the City Commission’s request. “We don’t think of it as ‘enabling,’ because people sleeping in 28-degree weather are not eager to remain homeless. We just help improve a dire situation.”

McCulloch, who teaches Poverty Law and Policy and directs The Florida Bar Foundation Public Service Law Fellows Program, views homelessness as a systemic problem. “Affordable housing has decreased since the 80s. It’s like musical chairs: if 12 people compete for 10 chairs, two will be without a chair.”

McCulloch was named an Alachua/Bradford County Woman of Distinction last year in recognition of her community involvement and service, including chairing the Board of Directors of the domestic violence shelter “Peaceful Paths” and serving on a county task force on indigent health care. She recently wrote a layperson’s guide to Florida’s welfare program for low income people and social service providers.

Volunteering? Know Someone Who Is?

This is the first in a series of “Beyond the Law School” articles featuring UFLaw students, staff, faculty or organizations whose volunteer efforts benefit our community.

Tell us about your pro bono work and/or that of others here. Contact FlaLaw Editor Debra Amirin (Amirin@law.ufl.edu) or UFLaw student Deb Cupples (cupples1@bellsouth.net) with tips or story information.

Legal Writing Professor Joe Jackson and CGR Director of Social Policy Elizabeth McCulloch load donated items from law school staff, faculty and students for distribution to Gainesville’s homeless.

According to McCulloch, causes of homelessness vary: “Closing of state mental hospitals in the 70s put many disabled people on the streets, but that is only one reason. Others are like the 50-year-old woman who quit her job to nurse an ailing family member. When she tried to find work again, she couldn’t. Now she’s homeless and wondering why.”

For others, homelessness resulted from early mistakes involving education, sex or drugs.

“Poor people don’t have many cushions,” McCulloch said. “Rarely are they rescued from ‘youthful indiscretions.’”

“We all receive help in one form or another,” Jackson noted. “Mortgage interest tax-deductions, for example, are government subsidies. They just benefit people who can afford houses.”

McCulloch aimed closer to home. “Public-university law students pay only 25 percent of their actual education costs: the state pays the rest. And the government subsidizes student loans.”

“The homeless are as varied as any other group,” she added. “Some drink, but I imagine the same is true of many college students.”

Jackson said. “Most of the homeless I’ve encountered are good people. I offered one man food, and he said, ‘I’ve got enough for now, give it to someone who needs it.’”

HOME does not request donations, but will accept them. Clean clothing/blankets and canned/boxed foods that need no cooking can be placed in boxes outside JMBA’s office, and checks can be written to Liz McCulloch or Joe Jackson (230 or 250 Bruton-Geer Hall) with “HOME” written on the memo line.

Foley & Lardner Scholarship Awarded to UFLaw Student

Karla Haynes (1L, right) will receive a $5,000 Foley & Lardner Minority Scholarship, which includes an internship and other benefits.

"Karla is an outstanding woman, and I'm sure this is one of many honors that will come her way," said

Desta Meghoo-Peddie, Associate Director of the Center for the Study of Race and Race Relations.

Haynes is from Yukon, Oklahoma, and managed business-development for the Miami Herald Online and El Nuevo Herald Digital before enrolling at the law school. She worked for the U.S. Department of Commerce as an International Trade Specialist and Export Administration Specialist, where she helped firms develop high-potential international markets and counseled them regarding regulatory obligations. She has lived in the Dominican Republic and is fluent in Spanish.

Meghoo said, "A Foley & Lardner representative told me it was a tough choice, because all candidates were well prepared. He was speaking about my Virgil Hawkins Summer Fellows, first-year students who typically have little experience with the legal profession. I am proud of them all.

"The state cut minority scholarships, and our alumni and concerned law firms are working to re-establish them," said Meghoo. "Until then, it is encouraging to have firms such as Foley & Lardner who realize that including minorities in their law firms is not just good business, but also the right thing to do. We applaud their commitment to diversity and equality."

Write a Successful Exam."

- Feb. 28, time/location TBA. Celebration concludes with a Comedy and Game Night of popular games and comedic
