1) What is the wait list?
In order to ensure that we enroll the target number of students in the entering class, the Office of Admissions creates a “wait list” of candidates each year. Candidates on the wait list are those that UF Law feels are competitive for a possible later vacancy in the entering class. We believe, given your credentials, you would be successful at UF Law should a position within the class become available. These candidates will be considered for seats in the class that may be available after the deposit deadline, or seats which may become available before the first day of Orientation, Tuesday, August 7th.

2) How many people are on the wait list?
There are usually a few hundred candidates on the wait list. The Office of Admissions extends a number of wait list offers, however, not all candidates choose to remain on the wait list as they move forward with other plans. The number of waitlisted students fluctuates throughout the summer.

3) Is the wait list ranked?
The wait list is unranked and all files are re-reviewed by our office on an on-going basis as space becomes available in the class. This process can continue up until the first day of Orientation.

4) How many people do you admit from the wait list?
The number of students who have been offered admission from the wait list varies from year to year. It will depend on how many students submit a deposit and how many students later withdraw from UF Law to pursue other plans. As we monitor the size of the class very closely and watch the number of seat deposits and withdrawals, our office continuously reviews the wait list.

5) What does the Office of Admissions look at when reviewing the wait list?
The wait list review process is a comparative and holistic one. Our office will review waitlisted candidates against each other and will look for demonstrated strength in all areas such as academic credentials, including LSAT score, undergraduate GPA, level of writing skills, breadth of studies, and other criteria such as work/life experience, activities and leadership experience.

6) How do I increase my chances of being admitted from the wait list?
Candidates who were completing a Bachelor’s degree at the time of application are strongly encouraged to submit updated transcripts with final semester grades to LSAC. Our office will consider any updates to GPAs and transcripts. Additionally, candidates with any changes to their resume should email an updated resume as an attachment to our office.

Letters of continued interest are also very helpful to our office as it re-reviews files of those candidates who have strongly indicated they would like to enroll at UF Law should space become available. Letters of continued interest will be accepted as email attachments (admissions@law.ufl.edu), or via postal mail. Additional letters of recommendation, updated admissions statements, etc. are not required or necessary.

And of course, you should submit your Wait List Confirmation form as soon as possible and no later than Monday, March 19, 2018, so that we may add you to the active wait list.

7) When will I be notified about an offer from the wait list?
Applicants could be offered a seat in the class from the wait list anytime from now up until the first day of Orientation. Unfortunately, there are many “unknowns” throughout the wait list process. As summer passes, and seats become available, our office will evaluate waitlisted candidates for possible admission. We will periodically update you throughout the summer with a series of newsletters about any wait list activity.

8) If I am offered a seat in the entering class, how will I be notified?
The Office of Admissions will contact you via email regarding any activity on the wait list that may affect you directly. Therefore, please let us know of any changes to your email address, check your email regularly and ensure that your computer’s filters accept UF Law emails.

9) If I am offered admission how long would I have to accept an offer?
As the wait list process can move quickly if space becomes available in the entering class, candidates admitted from the wait list generally have 24 - 48 hours to make a decision as to whether they will accept the offer of admission. This is because we will need to expedite the activation of your file as an enrolling student and begin the registration process allowing enough time for you to access your course schedule information, purchase books, and prepare for your first-day assignments. Acceptance of an offer will require a $200 deposit as well as the submission of an enrollment form that certifies that you have withdrawn from all other law schools to which you have been admitted.

10) Should I visit the campus?
In the event that space does become available and we are able to offer a candidate a seat in the class, the turnaround time can be very short, usually 24 - 48 hours. Therefore, if visiting our campus will be an important factor in your decision, we recommend that you plan ahead since you will likely be asked to submit your admissions deposit quickly and often times we may not be able to grant extensions for visits to be arranged. 11) If I am admitted from the wait list, will I be eligible for merit-based scholarships and financial aid?
Subject to the availability of funds, candidates admitted from the wait list will be evaluated in the same manner as other admitted candidates for merit-based scholarships. Candidates should complete a FAFSA if they wish to be considered for federal loans. We also encourage you to review the cost of attendance posted on our website (https://www.law.ufl.edu/admissions/costs-and-financial-aid) so you can plan for financing your legal education.
12) Should I deposit at another school or wait to hear from UF?
Candidates on the wait list should move forward with plans to attend another institution. Unfortunately, we cannot guarantee a seat in the class or a time by which you may hear. Therefore, we encourage you to make alternate plans to ensure your enrollment at a law school this fall. In the event that we are able to offer you a seat in the class, and depending on the timing of the offer, you may risk losing a deposit made at another institution.

13) What if my plans change and I do not want to remain on your wait list?
If your plans change and you would like to withdraw from the wait list, please notify the Office of Admissions immediately via email (admissions@law.ufl.edu). We will update your file accordingly.

If you have any questions regarding the Wait List that this FAQ list does not cover, please do not hesitate to contact us at admissions@law.ufl.edu or 352-273-0890.
