

2021 TECHNOLOGY, MEDIA, & PRIVACY LAW (TMPL) CONFERENCE

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA LEVIN COLLEGE OF LAW

Pedro Allende

Pedro Allende is the former Deputy Assistant Secretary for Infrastructure, Risk, and Resilience Policy at the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. He also previously spent time at the Department of Energy and the Department of Labor. Allende received a B.S. in Economics and Political Science, M.S. in Decision & Information Science, and a J.D. from the University of Florida.

David Ardia

David Ardia joined the University of North Carolina Law faculty in 2011 and serves as the Reef C. Ivey II Excellence Fund Term Professor of Law and faculty co-director of the UNC Center for Media Law and Policy. He also holds a secondary appointment at the UNC School of Media and Journalism. His teaching and research interests include constitutional law, media law, internet law, and torts. Ardia is the author of Media and the Law, as well as numerous articles and essays on First Amendment, privacy, government transparency, and Internet law topics. His work has appeared in the Illinois Law Review, William & Mary Law Review, BYU Law Review, and Berkeley Technology Law Journal, among others. Before joining North Carolina Law, Ardia was a fellow at the Berkman Klein Center for Internet & Society at Harvard University where he founded and directed the center's Digital Media Law Project. He received a J.D. from Syracuse University and an L.L.M. from Harvard University. Ardia also holds an M.S. in Environmental Science from SUNY College of Environmental Science and Forestry and a B.S. in Interdisciplinary Engineering and Management from Clarkson University.

Zita Arocha

Zita Arocha is a bilingual journalist and associate professor of practice in the University of Texas El Paso (UTEP) Department of Communication since 2004. She is director and founder of borderzine.com, a multimedia web magazine at UTEP that prepares Hispanic college journalists for jobs in 21st century newsrooms. For over 20 years she worked as a reporter, for various news outlets like The Washington Post, The Miami Herald, The Miami News and The Tampa Times. She was executive director of the National Association of Hispanic Journalists from 1993-1997 and was training coordinator for the Freedom Forum's Chips Quinn Scholars Program from 2000-02. She is a freelance contributor to various national publications including The New York Times, USA Today and Los Angeles Times, and her memoir, Guajira, a Cuban-American Childhood, won a Mayborn Literary Excellence Award in 2013. Excerpts from the manuscript have been published in the literary journals Rigorous and Rio Grande Review. Arocha also leads student trips to Cuba, the land of her birth. She earned a master's degree in English and comparative literature from the University of South Florida, and an MFA in bilingual creative writing at UTEP.

D. Victoria Baranetsky

D. Victoria Baranetsky is general counsel at The Center for Investigative Reporting, where she counsels reporters on newsgathering, libel, privacy, subpoenas, security, and other newsroom matters. Prior to CIR, Baranetsky worked at The New York Times, Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, and the Wikimedia Foundation. After graduating from Harvard Law School, Baranetsky received a master's degree in philosophy from Oxford University and clerked on the U.S. Second Circuit Court of Appeals. She holds a bachelor's degree from Columbia University, a graduate degree from Columbia Journalism School, and is a fellow at the Tow Center for Digital Journalism at Columbia University. She is barred in California, New York, and New Jersey. She also teaches media law at Berkeley Law School as an adjunct professor.

Hannah Bloch-Wehba

Hannah Bloch-Wehba is an Associate Professor of Law at Texas A&M University School of Law. She teaches and writes on law and technology. Her scholarship explores the intersection of tech and civil liberties, primarily focusing on free expression, privacy and government accountability. Her interests include transparency and accountability for law enforcement, public access to information, and the use of new technologies in government decision-making. From 2016–2018, she was a supervising attorney in Yale Law School's Media Freedom & Information Access Clinic, a law student clinic dedicated to increasing government transparency, defending the essential work of news gatherers, and protecting freedom of expression by providing pro bono legal services, pursuing impact litigation and developing policy initiatives. Previously, Bloch-Wehba was the inaugural Stanton Foundation National Security–Free Press Fellow at the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press and worked as a litigation associate at Baker Botts LLP. Bloch-Wehba is a graduate of NYU School of Law, where she was an Institute for International Law & Justice/Law and Security Scholar, and of the University of Texas at Austin.

Albert Fox Cahn

Albert Fox Cahn is the Surveillance Technology Oversight Project's (S.T.O.P.) founder and executive director, a fellow at the Engelberg Center on Innovation Law & Policy at N.Y.U. School of Law, a member of the NYU Alliance for Public Interest Technology, and a columnist for Gotham Gazette. As a lawyer, technologist, writer, and interfaith activist, Cahn began S.T.O.P. in the belief that emerging surveillance technologies pose an unprecedented threat to civil rights and the promise of a free society. In addition to his work at S.T.O.P., Cahn serves on the New York Immigration Coalition's Immigrant Leaders Council, the New York Immigrant Freedom Fund's Advisory Council, and is an editorial board member for the Anthem Ethics of Personal Data Collection. Cahn received his J.D., cum laude, from Harvard Law School (where he was an editor of the Harvard Law & Policy Review), and his B.A. in Politics and Philosophy from Brandeis University.

Mark D. Cole

Mark D. Cole is Professor for Media and Telecommunication Law at the University of Luxembourg, where he is also the Course Director for the Master in General European Law LL.M. program. In addition, he is a Faculty Member of the Interdisciplinary Centre for Security, Reliability and Trust (SnT) of the University of Luxembourg. Cole specializes in Media Law, covering both traditional mass media as well as the law of the new information technologies. He is one of the authors of the leading commentary on the Interstate Broadcasting Treaty as well as the Treaty on the Protection of Minors in the Media in Germany. Cole gained practical experience in media law at the DG Competition of the European Commission, a law office specializing in Intellectual Property Law and the legal department of a television broadcasting company. He holds a doctorate from the Johannes Gutenberg Universität Mainz and holds both German State Examinations in Law.

Cynthia Conti-Cook

Cynthia Conti-Cook is a tech fellow, working with the Ford Foundation's Gender, Racial, and Ethnic Justice team to help build grantees' capacity to respond to the expanding use of surveillance technologies against immigrant communities, as well as the potential use of technology to criminalize people who seek or aid abortions. As a civil rights litigator and public defender, most recently at the Legal Aid Society of New York, Conti-Cook led class and individual civil rights federal and state actions, bringing impact litigation on a range of policy matters. She also pioneered a first-of-its-kind public database (CAPstat) that tracks misconduct by New York City police officers, providing a critical means of transparency to an issue that has historically been shrouded in secrecy. Her work on CAPstat has been featured in the New York Times, the New York Daily News, and El Diario, and is being replicated by other public defender offices across the country. Conti-Cook's work at Ford also includes supporting the mass incarceration team's efforts to help the field leverage technology to advance police accountability, and to help the team better understand and respond to algorithmic bias in bail, sentencing, and parole considerations. She served as a 2018-19 Data & Society fellow, working on a variety of topics related to surveillance and the intersection of technology and social justice. She received her J.D. from CUNY Law and a B.A. from Bard College.

Amy Gajda

Amy Gajda is the Class of 1937 Professor of Law at Tulane Law School. Much of her scholarly work draws on insights from her many years as an award-winning journalist and focuses on the shifting boundaries of press freedoms, particularly in light of the digital disruption of traditional media and rising public anxieties about the erosion of privacy. Harvard University Press has published two of her books, and her third book, The Secret History of the Right to Privacy, is under contract with Viking and is slated to be published in Spring of 2022. She is currently serving as an advisor on the American Law Institute's new Restatement on Defamation and Privacy. She has chaired the Association of American Law Schools' Section on Defamation and Privacy and its Section on Mass Communication and has also led the Law and Policy Division of the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication. At Tulane, she has won the top teaching awards at both Tulane University and Tulane Law School.

Bill Girdner

Bill Girdner is the Editor at Courthouse News Service. Courthouse News Service is a nationwide news service for lawyers and the news media focusing on civil litigation, from the date of filing through the appellate level.

William Hamilton

William Hamilton is an electronic discovery and data privacy expert and veteran litigator. Prior to joining the faculty served as the electronic discovery partner for his national law firm. Hamilton has taught electronic discovery at the University of Florida for the past decade and is the co-author of the LexisNexis Practice Guide Florida e-Discovery and Evidence and co-author of A Student Electronic Discovery Primer: An Essential Companion for Civil Procedure Courses. Hamilton is also the General Editor of the LexisNexis Practice Guide: Florida Contract Litigation. Hamilton is also a neutral arbitrator and mediator for the World Intellectual Property Organization and the author of numerous domain name dispute decisions. Hamilton has been recognized in Chambers USA, Florida Legal Elite, Best Lawyers in America, and Florida Super Lawyers.

Maryam Jamshidi

Maryam Jamshidi is Assistant Professor of Law at the University of Florida Levin College of Law. Jamshidi teaches and writes in the areas of national security, public international law, the law of foreign relations, and tort law. Her scholarship examines the various ways in which private law, particularly torts, shapes and is transformed by public laws touching on national security and international law matters. In exploring these dynamics, Jamshidi's work draws on political and critical theory, as well as sociology. Her work has appeared or is forthcoming in the Washington University Law Review, the Southern California Law Review, the University of Chicago Law Review, and the University of Colorado Law Review. She also regularly publishes in popular media outlets. Prior to joining the Levin College of Law, Jamshidi served as an Assistant Professor of Law at the NYU Law School. She also worked as an associate in several leading Washington D.C. law firms, including White & Case, where she worked primarily on issues relating to national security and foreign relations law. Jamshidi clerked for the Honorable Judge Gladys Kessler of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. She received a J.D. from the University of Pennsylvania Carey Law School, an M.Sc in Political Theory from the London School of Economics, and an A.B. in Political Science from Brown University.

Ronald Krotoszynski

Ronald Krotoszynski is the John S. Stone Chair, Director of Faculty Research, and Professor of Law at the University of Alabama School of Law. Krotoszynski is also the author of several books including: Privacy Revisited: A Global Perspective On The Right To Be Left Alone (Oxford University Press 2016) and Reclaiming The Petition Clause: Seditious Libel, "Offensive" Protest, And The Right To Petition The Government For A Redress Of Grievances (Yale University Press 2012). Prior to joining the faculty at the University of Alabama School of Law, Krotoszynski served on the law faculty at Washington and Lee University. He clerked for the Honorable Frank M. Johnson, Jr., of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit and was an associate with Covington & Burling, in Washington, D.C. Krotoszynski earned his B.A. and M.A. from Emory University and J.D. and LL.M. from Duke University, where he was articles editor for the Duke Law Journal and selected for Order of the Coif.

James B. Lake

Jim Lake is a partner at Thomas & LoCicero where his practice focuses on media law, intellectual property, and business litigation. Lake represents clients in state and federal courts and the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office, and he frequently renders advice on newsgathering, trademark, and copyright matters. He earned both his B.A. and J.D. from Washington and Lee University.

Frank LoMonte

Frank LoMonte is the Director of the Brechner Center for Freedom of Information at the University of Florida College of Journalism and Communications. Previously, he was the Executive Director of the Student Press Law Center (SPLC) in Washington, D.C. Before joining the SPLC, LoMonte practiced law with Sutherland Asbill and Brennan LLP in Atlanta and clerked for federal judges on the Northern District of Georgia and the Eleventh Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals. Prior to embarking on his legal career, he was an award-winning investigative journalist and political columnist. He was the capitol correspondent for the Florida Times Union (Jacksonville), Washington correspondent for Morris News Service and the Atlanta bureau chief for Morris. He was the Otis Brumby Distinguished Visiting Professor of Law at the Georgia Law School in spring-summer 2014 and has been a lecturer since 2015 in the University of Georgia Washington Program, teaching a course for undergraduates on “Law of Social Media.” He earned his J.D. from the University of Georgia School of Law and earned his B.A. from Georgia State University.

Jasmine McNealy

Jasmine McNealy is Associate Professor at the University of Florida College of Journalism and Communications, a Fellow at the Stanford University Digital Civil Society Lab, and a faculty associate at the Berkman Klein Center for Internet & Society. Both an attorney and social scientist, she studies media, information, and emerging technology, with a view toward influencing law and policy. Her current research focuses on privacy, surveillance and data governance with an emphasis on marginalized communities. She earned a PhD in mass communication and a J.D. at the University of Florida, and a BS in both journalism and Afro-American studies at the University of Wisconsin.

Jon Mills

Jon Mills is Dean Emeritus, Professor of Law, and Director of Center for Governmental Responsibility at UF’s Levin College of Law. He is Counsel to Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP. Mills is former Dean of UF Levin College of Law from 1999-2003 and former Speaker of the Florida House of Representatives and served as member of the 1997-1998 Florida Constitution Revision

Commission where he was Chair of Style and Drafting Committee and selected Most Valuable Member. He was the reporter for the ABA's Task Force on Preservation of the Justice System in 2011 and is a Fellow of the American Bar Foundation. Mills teaches Privacy, State Constitutional Law, Law and Policy in the Americas and Legislative Drafting. Mills holds a B.A. from Stetson University and received his J.D. from the University of Florida.

Amy Kristin Sanders

Amy Kristin Sanders is an award-winning former journalist, licensed attorney and associate professor at the University of Texas at Austin School of Journalism and Media. Previously, she taught for more than four years at Northwestern University's campus in Doha, Qatar. Sanders has authored more than 20 articles in law reviews and communication journals on topics related to media law, and her work has been funded by multiple grants, most recently from the National Science Foundation. She also co-authored First Amendment and the Fourth Estate: The Law of Mass Media. She earned a PhD in mass communication law from the University of Florida. Sanders also holds an MA in professional journalism and a J.D. from the University of Iowa.

Tarak Shah

Tarak Shah is a data scientist who joined the Human Rights Data Analysis Group in 2018, where he cleans, processes and builds models from data in order to understand evidence of human rights abuses. Previously, he was the Assistant Director of Prospect Analysis at the University of California, Berkeley, in the University Development and Alumni Relations, where he developed tools and analytics to support major gift fundraising. Shah earned his B.A. in mathematics and philosophy from the University of California, Berkeley.

Sara Sidner

Sara Sidner is CNN's multiple award winning national and international correspondent, based in the network's Los Angeles bureau. Recently, Sidner's coverage has focused on COVID-19. She also led the network's coverage in Ferguson, Missouri where protests continued for months after an unarmed black teenager was shot and killed by a white police officer. As an international correspondent, Sidner reported on a wide range of subjects, from terrorism to business to social and cultural issues. She has reported from a multitude of countries, including Libya, Egypt, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Cambodia, Indonesia, and Taiwan. Prior to joining CNN, Sidner was an anchor and reporter at local television news stations in San Francisco, Dallas, Florida, and Missouri. She received multiple awards during this time, including a regional Emmy Award, an Edward R. Murrow Award, and several Telly Awards. Sidner received her journalism degree from the University of Florida and was named an Alumni of Distinction in 2011.

Zahra Stardust

Zahra Stardust is an activist, researcher and socio-legal scholar working at the intersections of sexuality, criminal law, human rights and social justice and a Fellow at the Berkman Klein Center for Internet & Society at Harvard University. Her doctoral research examining the regulation of queer and feminist pornographies through criminal laws, classification codes, platform governance and the capitalist co-optation of sexual subcultures won a Dean's award for Outstanding PhD Thesis. Stardust is currently working on projects concerning sex work stigma, consent law reform and anti-protest legislation. She has studied at the Summer Institute on Sexuality, Culture and Society at the University of Amsterdam and the Summer Doctoral Program at the University of Oxford Internet Institute.

Al-Amyr Sumar

Al-Amyr Sumar is counsel at The New York Times Company, where he handles newsroom matters. Al-Amyr was previously the First Amendment Fellow at The Times and an associate at Ballard Spahr LLP (and before then, Levine Sullivan Koch & Schulz, LLP). He clerked for judges at the Southern District of New York, Supreme Court of Canada, and Court of Appeal for Ontario. He is a graduate of Harvard Law School, the University of Cambridge, and the University of Alberta.

Jason Tashea

Jason Tashea is an award-winning journalist, entrepreneur, and writer making sense of justice systems and technology. A lawyer by training, he is the product manager at Quest for Justice, a case management platform for self-represented litigants, the editor of the Justice Tech Download newsletter, and the distinguished visiting technologist at the George Washington University School of Law. Previously, he was an adjunct professor of law at Georgetown University Law Center at staff writer at the ABA Journal. He is a member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers' Law Committee and the Legal Services Corporation's Emerging Leaders Council. He earned his B.A. from Linfield College and his J.D. from the University of Oregon.

Russell L. Weaver

Russell L. Weaver is the Professor of Law and Distinguished University Scholar at the University of Louisville Brandeis School of Law. He teaches the First Amendment, Constitutional Law, Advanced Constitutional Law, Remedies, Administrative Law, Criminal Law, and Criminal Procedure. He has received the Brandeis School of Law's awards for teaching, scholarship, and service, and has been awarded the President's Award (University of Louisville) for Outstanding Research, Scholarship and Creative Activity in the Field of Social Science, the President's Award for Outstanding Research, Scholarship and Creative Activity in the Career Achievement Category, and the President's Award for Distinguished Service. In addition to authoring "From Gutenberg to the Internet: Free Speech, Advancing Technology and the Implications for Democracy," and "The Right to Speak Ill," he served as a consultant to the constitutional drafting commissions of Belarus and Kyrgyzstan and as a commentator on the Russian Constitution. He graduated cum laude from the University of Missouri School of Law and earned his B.A. from the University of Missouri.