Professional Activities:

Timothy McLendon is a Legal Skills Professor and Assistant Director of the Center for Governmental Responsibility, a research and policy institute attached to the University of Florida Levin College of Law. Mr. McLendon received his B.A. in history from Duke University in 1989. His history studies included two semesters at the Universität Wien, Vienna, Austria. He received his J.D. in 1994 from the University of Florida. His research has involved environmental and local land use law, sustainable development, historic preservation law, Florida constitutional law, and international environmental law. He is the co-author of a casebook on Florida Constitutional Law. He is the author of a handbook on Florida historic preservation law, and two studies on the economic impacts of historic preservation in Florida (2000, 2010). He directed a USAID-funded project working with Colombian law schools on human rights from 2012-15, co-ordinating visits and training sessions. He participated in USIA-funded mediation and dispute resolution projects in Haiti from 1996-2003. He has participated in training programs for Brazilian judges and prosecutors in comparative environmental and land use law in 1996, and each summer since 2000. Since 2012, he has co-authored the annual Latin American Business Environment Report for the UF Center for Latin American Studies, contributing the legal environment section. He worked with the Florida Constitution Revision Commission in 1997-98, researching legal and constitutional issues, and provided research support for the Florida Supreme Court's Committee on Privacy and Court Records from 2003-05. He served on the Florida Supreme Court's Committee on Access to Court Records, 2006-09.

At the University of Florida Levin College of Law, he teaches Legal Writing, Historic Preservation Law, an interdisciplinary seminar on Law and Policy Issues in the Americas, and has taught courses on Florida Constitutional Law and Legislative Drafting. He has taught European Union Law in the Department of Political Science. He has lectured on comparative constitutional and land use law issues in Brazil, Peru, Colombia and Poland.

A member of the Florida Bar, Mr. McLendon's practice in state and federal courts has included issues relating to constitutional law, privacy rights, open government, environmental and education law, as well as initiative amendments to the Florida Constitution.
